Printed by John B. 1797

N. B. There are several Towns within the County of Suffolk, which are call'd by the same Names, though they lye distant from one another; and others, which though they have some difference in the Spelling, have none at all in common Pronunciation. Therefore, to avoid more Confusion and Mistakes, it has been found necessary to put many of those Towns, which are either written or pronounced alike, under one and the same Head; where though the particular Votes belonging to each Town stand intermix'd, yet, 'tis hoped, that those who are acquainted with them, will not find it hard to distinguish them.

If any Freeholders Names are not truly Spelled, that ought to be excused, considering that the Clerks, who were Strangers to them, could do no more than to set them down according to their Sound.

Beside

Beside the Mistakes that might be made by the Clerks, who took the Poll, for want of Persons and Places Names being distinctly pronounced, some appear to have been made by the Transcriber, who seems to have wrote from somebody who Read to him, and being unskilled in the Hands used by Clerks, might, for Example, for Denington, read Deuington, and he might write Duington, &c. And thus the following Mistakes are supposed to have happened.
